Since its launch in 1995, over 2,500 companies have joined AIM – raising more than £34bn in the process, both through initial public offerings (IPOs) and further capital raisings.

What is AIM

AIM is the London Stock Exchange's international market for smaller growing companies. On AIM you will find a wide range of businesses ranging from young, venture capital-backed start-ups to well-established, mature organizations looking to expand. Since its launch in 1995, over 2,500 companies have joined AIM – raising more than £34bn in the process, both through initial public offerings (IPOs) and further capital raisings. This capital has helped AIM-quoted companies of all kinds to fund their development and pursue their ambitions. Many companies have made the transition to the Exchange's Main Market following their success and positive experience on AIM.

Who is involved in AIM?

AIM has a large, diverse and committed community of stakeholders, made up of various market participants. Specialist advisers are crucial to the market's success, and range from dedicated Nominated Advisers (Nomads) who play a central role in the life of an AIM company, through to lawyers, accountants and brokers. Other important participants and stakeholders include investors, public relations (PR) and investor relations (IR) agencies who help companies join the market and make the most of their AIM quotation, and market committees and publishers focused on AIM and its companies.

Joining AIM –International Companies

AIM is the world's most successful growth market and the international companies quoted on it benefit from being at the heart of global finance community. International companies come to AIM for a variety of reasons, but they all gain the same wealth of capital-raising opportunities by having their securities quoted and traded in London. AIM is specially designed to meet for the diverse needs of growing companies from around the world. Over 250 companies incorporated outside the UK are quoted on AIM, and the number is continuing to rise all the time. This strong international interest reflects the fact that AIM presents an ideal environment for young international companies looking to use a public market to fund further expansion and raise global profile. Companies from all around the world, of all sizes, and at every stage of development are able to join AIM. As an Exchange-regulated market, it enables this wide spectrum of international businesses to tap into the capital, liquidity and profile of the London capital markets through a simple and speedy admission route, few entry criteria and flexible regulation. The figures speak for themselves. In 2005, there were 519 admissions to AIM. These included 335 IPOs, of which 76 were international companies¹. The total amount of money raised, both through new and further issues, was £8.9 billion — and the total market value of overseas companies on AIM has leapt by 181.6% in the last 12 months alone.
